

LeadingAge along with Generations United recently received a grant from Retirement Research Foundation to better understand how many housing providers are currently, or have recently, implemented intergenerational programs at their communities.

Additionally, we are interested in providers who have not implemented an intergenerational program, but are interested in doing so in the future (intergenerational programs are loosely defined as programs that bring generations together for mutual benefit).

We are currently soliciting as many responses as possible from affordable housing providers about:

1. Whether or not intergenerational programs are being implemented at your community.
2. If your community is not implementing a program, are you interested in doing so in the future? And;
3. What youth age groups are being targeted.

This survey, which will take less than 2 minutes, will greatly assist us will greatly assist LeadingAge develop best practices for successful program implementation, particularly within the affordable housing setting.

Click here to complete the survey, or you can email Project Director Taryn Patterson (tpatterson@leadingage.org) to provide the info off line.