Description: CATA's Food Justice Program seeks 2 Co-Coordinators to work together to develop and implement CATA's Food Justice Program. Tasks to be shared by the two coordinators will include coordinating the youth food justice internship program – including recruitment of interns, curriculum planning and implementation, management of youth interns, and evaluation of the program as well as coordinating CATA's community garden in Bridgeton, NJ. Food Justice Coordinators will manage the day-to-day care and maintenance of the garden, to plant, propagate, harvest, market and care for plants, as well as distribution of the garden produce through our seasonal weekly farmers' market. Coordinators will be expected to implement and demonstrate sustainable agro-ecological production, working with teen youth, volunteer management skills, event planning and experiential education including attending and organizing workshops. Community members are also engaged in the garden, so the coordinators will work with existing members as well as assist in organizing outreach and education to identify and recruit new community volunteers. This position requires manual labor and the ability to work independently and with volunteers of various ages and abilities. Additional activities include representing CATA in efforts locally and nationally to promote food sovereignty. Coordinator positions are year-round at 30 hours/week or more during summer peak growing season combined with youth programming. Coordinators collaborate with CATA's community radio station – RadioCATA a few times a year and also work closely with CATA's communications team to provide content for social media.
